she found west Africa.

MARY KINGSLEY

Two years after Marianne North died, Mary Kingsley set off on the first of her famous journeys to West Africa. Mary's father had travelled all over the world, making a collection of interesting birds, beasts and fish, and when he died she decided to continue his work. Her reason for choosing West Africa was that she wanted to work in a tropical area. However, she was interested not only in animals but also in the way the people lived.
